Dow Gains 55, Is Up For Week

Steadier Dollar. Overseas Gains Stir Confidence

NEW YORK -- Wall Street ended another volatile week on Friday with a further rebound in stock prices and market confidence. The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 stocks rose 55.20 points, to close at 1,993.53, a gain of 2.8 percent. It was the market's fourth consecutive gain.

Dealers said confidence seemed gradually to be recovering in the market, with a rise of 144 points, or 8 percent, in the Dow in the past three sessions. For the week, the Dow climbed a total of 42.77 points.

EMS Takes Up the Strain of Falling Dollar

By Reginald Dale International Herald Tribune

PARIS -At the end of a stormy eek in world foreign exchange markets, the European Communi ty's eight-nation currency bloc, the European Monetary System, ap-peared Friday to have weathered the latest buffeting by a tumbling

But government officials and private analysts warned that the system of jointly floating European exchange rates could come under further strain in the days ahead, particularly if the dollar continues

Tensions in the EMS were eviday when the Dow index climbed dent early in the week as funds deserting the dollar fled into the system's hardest carrency, the Deutsche mark, pushing it upward against the weaker French franc

By Friday however the Bank of France seemed to have staved off initial pressure on the franc with what one official described as "ver impressive" defensive tactics. Rightists See Ginsburg as One of Us'

By Ruth Marcus and Al Kamen Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — In nominating Judge Douglas H. Ginsburg to the Supreme Court, President Ronald Reagan has turned from one of the country's best-known conservative jurists to one whose views outside the field of antitrust and regulatory law are largely a mystery.

In contrast to Judge Robert H.

professor who has served on the written little, if anything, on the contentions social issues he would have to grapple with as a justice.

Although Judge Ginsburg is relarively little known, his conservative backers in the administration pushed for him above Judge Anthony M. Kennedy, the other leading candidate, largely because they believed Judge Ginsburg would be more "reliable," as one senior administration official put it, in adhering to conservative principles of judicial restraint. Asked how the administration could be so certain Judge Ginsburg would not turn out to be a surprise on the court, one senior Justice Department official said confidently, based on private conversa-tions with Judge Ginsburg, "He's one of us."

Goat? Sheep? No, It's a Geep

U.S. Researchers Create Livestock and Controversy

By Keith Schneider New York Times Service

DAVIS, California - Old MacDonald had a farm, and on that farm he had some geeps. In an experimental barnyard on the University of California's Davis campus, researchers are raising the world's largest herd of man-made livestock. a strange group of creatures with the face and horns of a goat and the body of a sheep.

Most of the geeps are still babies, peeking from behind the legs of their mothers, which are adult

But an adult geep gave birth to a sheep last summer. Goats have shown promise of bearing geeps. And more sheep are expected soon to have

Gary Anderson and his colleagues have made nine geeps by taking cells from a seven-day-old goat embryo, inserting them into a seven-day-old sheep embryo and then implanting the joint embryo into a ewe's womb.

Nowhere is the power of the new life-transforming techniques in animal biotechnology more clearly evident than in the open barns of this 79year-old university, a renowned center for farm research previously known best for developing square, thick-skinned processing tomatoes and huge machines to harvest them. For years the university, which is near Sacramento, has been at the center of a national debate over its advocacy of an increasingly industrialized form of agriculture dependent on chemicals, machines and the ability in design plants and animals to fit that production system. With the development of the geeps, new criticism has erupted, even as supporters have been energized, showering this campus in recent months with cheers and jeers.

The geeps are the handiwork of Mr. Anderson, a 40-year-old reproductive physiologist who prefers to call his creations chimeras. In Greek mythology, chimeras were monstrous animals, part serpent, part lion and part goat.

Mr. Anderson's geeps, however, are neither horrible nor ugly. They are, he believes, intelligent, Geeps just look strange. The oldest, Duchess, was born in April 1985 to a sheep. Duchess has the face and eyes of a goat, but the rest of her is quite sheepish: short legs, eleft hooves and thick won! Mr. Anderson insists that his research is invaluable for studying the functions and vital processes of livestock pregnancies.

"We are learning about the nature of the barrier which prevents an embryo of one species from being carried to term by another species." he said.

Understanding how the process works, Mr. Anderson added, could lead to important advances, including the ability in save endangered species by implanting fertilized eggs into more common aminoral arthropould act as increases mothers. mals that would act as surrogate mothers. Gorbachev and Reagan To Meet Dec. 7 in U.S. To Sign Missile Treaty

By Don Oberdorfer and Lou Cannon

Washington Pau Service WASHINGTON - President Ronald Reagan announced Friday that he and Mikhail S. Gorbachev would bold a summit meeting in Washington starting Dec. 7 to sign a treaty banning intermediaterange nuclear missiles and work toward a pact next year halving U.S. and Soviet strategic offensive U.S. officials said the summit meeting was tentatively planned for three days, all of them in Washington, but that the Soviets had asked for flexibility in case Mr.

Gorbachev decided to stay longer. Mr. Reagan made the announce-ment in the presence of Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, who arrived in Washingum early Friday with a letter from Mr. Gorbachev proposing dates and an agenda for the meeting.

A week earlier, Mr. Gorbachev had declined to set dates for the meeting, telling Secretary of State George P. Shultz in a Kremlin ses-sion that be did not "feel comfortable" in agreeing to come to Washington in the absence of assurances of major strides toward curbs on strategie defense.

With Mr. Shevardnadze looking on Friday, Mr. Reagan said: There's no way that we can give up SDI," referring to the spacesed Strategie Defense Initiative.

He said that curbing strategie defense "is no longer put down as a flat demand" by the Soviets as a required condition of the 50-percent ents in strategie offensive arms that the two nations are seeking.

A statement issued by the two overnments suggested the areas of tential negotiation on strategie defense, saying that, in Washing-ton. Mr. Reagan and Mr. Gorbachev would consider instructions to their Geneva arms negotiators "on the observance of and non-withdrawal from the ABM Treaty for an agreed period."

Mr Gorhachev, as recently as Oct. 23, proposed a 10-year nonterpretation of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty banning antimissile systems in space. The most recent U.S. proposal is for a 7-year nonwithdrawal period.

Soviet Marshal Sees Peril In SDI and Missile Cuts

New York Times Service MOSCOW - Soviet analysis say they believe deployment of President Ronald Reagan's antimissile defense system, coupled with an agreement to cut long-range nuclear weapons in half, could give the United States a decisive military advantage, the chief of the Soviet General Staff has de-

The official, Marshal Sergei F.

Akhromeyev, said that if the two countries reduced their long-range nuclear arsenals to 6,000 warbeads each, as they have agreed in principle to do, a defensive shield against nuclear weapons could be effective exough to pose a military threat.
"We are deeply convinced that creating a space-based defense for the territory of the United States would radically step up the military threat toward the Soviet Union. Marshal Akhromeyev's remarks came in response to questions about why the Soviet Union was so concerned about the proposed defense system, the Strategic Defense Initiative, when many American and Soviet experts contend such a shield would not be reliable.

over the issue of space weapons. In the interview and in written answers in questions submitted beforehand, Marshal Akhromeye also made these points:

• The proposals by American officials to offset the abolition of medium-range nuclear weapons in Eu-rope by adding more bombers and other weapons bave aroused deep suspicion in the Soviet military about American good faith.

• The Soviet military believes the 1979 decision to intervene in Afghanistan 'was not a mistake.' Marshal Akhromeyev's view on See SDL Page 2

Latin Peace Plan Totters as Managua And Salvador Rebels Begin to Balk

MANAGUA - The Central American peace plan appeared in jeopardy Friday after the Nicaraguan government and the leftist re-bels in El Salvador said they would refuse to take further steps in compliance with the pact.

The Sandinists, hardening their position, announced in Managua on Thursday night that Nicaragua would neither lift its five-year-old state of emergency nor put into effect a broad political amnesty under the five-nation accord until all aid to the U.S.-backed rebels known as contras was ended

In El Salvador, the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front guerrillas said they would not at-tend a new round of talks with the U.S.-backed Salvadoran govern-ment, which they blame for the slaying last Monday of a leading buman rights campaigner.

The talks on a cease-fire in the eight-year-old civil war in El Salvador had been due to begin in Mexico on Friday.

To attend this meeting would only contribute to the creation of false hopes and distract national and international attention from the murder," the rebels said in a statement on Thursday.

The two announcements came a week before the peace plan is scheduled to go into effect. The plan calls for, among other things, cease-fires in the civil wars in Nicaragua and El Salvador.

On Tuesday, President Oscar Arias Sánchez of Costa Rica, the architect of the plan, said that the negotiations among the five nanons involved in the pact were "at an impasse" and that Nicaragua must make new concessions to enhance the peace process.

The statement on Thursday in Managua, issued by the Sandinist National Liberation Front after a daylong meeting of its most important members, significantly hard-ened Nicaragua's position in the peace process as the deadline next Thursday for compliance with the Passengers can also complain to police headquarters, where a special board holds regular sessions. It seems to make little difference, though

To be sure, taxi drivers have their own complaints. Fares are low. Taxes are high. Noise is meessant.

"The traffic is awful," complained Paul de Angelis, the son of a taxi driver who has driven a Parisian cab himself for 17 years.
"A few years ago I could take in as much as 30 fares a day. Today f average 13 to 15." Above all there is the danger, Mr. Ben-Arous says, and the police confirm that an average of 40 assaults on taxi drivers are reported each month.

The recent killing was the 19th of a taxi driver since 1979.

For riders of African or Arab origin, it is Mr. Chirac's staff in City Hall says there

One is a bulletproof bubble installed around the driver, and another is a safe deposit box in which the driver's money can be locked.

It was even suggested that riders buy an electronic credit card and pay with it. Predictably, drivers say none of the proposed alternatives is worthwhile.

"Most turned down the bubble, even though we offered to subsidize it, said Jean-Pierre Richer, the traffic director at the Paris police. They like to gossip with the clients. It helps with the tip.

Instead, the taxi drivers want subsidies to purchase the hot seat. What about accidental use? Or will angry drivers settle even simple arguments by sending some "juice," as Mr. de Angelis calls the electric current, to the back seat? "No way," Ben-Arous said.

The device has a three-step trigger mechanism. A driver turns it on with a button, arms it with another and triggers it with a third. It unlocks in case of an accident.

"You can't call them anything else," he continued in a recording of his interview broadcast Friday over the Belgian French-language radio station RTBF. Referring to the immigrant workers, Mr. Michel said that they "are people who come from very far away and who have nothing in common with nur civilization.

Jetliner and Cargo Plane Nearly Hit

NEW YORK (NYT) — A Pan American World Airways jetliner came within about 50 feet (15 meters) of hitting a DC-3 cargo plane Tuesday night shartly before the two planes landed at St. Croix, Virgin Islands, government and airline officials said.

The crew of the Pan Am Boeing 727 told company officials that they had not seen the cargo plane until they turned on their landing lights at an altitude of 700 to 800 feet. The DC-3 was 150 to 175 feet ahead of them. and only a sharp climb to the left averted a collision, they said. The jetliner was flying from Miami with 60 people on board. The DC-3, a piston-engine craft, was operated out of Miami by Carib Air Cargo Inc.

The incident was one of the most disturbing in a continuing series of near collisions involving airliners. Federal Aviation Administration agents.

Mali Is Hit by Yellow Fever Epidemic

GENEVA (AP) — A yellow fever epidemic has hit Mali, killing 133 people since last month, the World Health Organization reported Friday.

A total of 270 cases have been recorded since the outbreak was discovered Sept. 21 in the country's southern part, which includes the capital, Bamako. The organization urged foreign travelers in get vaccinations. Yellow fever is usually carried by mosquitoes and can kill within a week in severe cases. Symptoms include fever, aches and vomiting.

Senate Votes to Protect Air Travelers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate passed wide-ranging legislation. Friday that would require airlines to report on their quality of service mandate drug testing for airline employees and provide consumers with 24-bour toll-free number to file complaints.

The Air Passenger Protection Act of 1987, approved 89-5, will now its melded with similar House legislation in a conference committee. The measure would require airlines to report on such matters as the percent measure would require airlines to report on such matters as the percentage of flights on time, how much luggage has been lost, the number of passengers denied boarding and the number of flights canceled.

The bill would require that airline ticket and travel agents have information in their computers showing how close to schedule each U.S. airline flight was, on average, the previous month. The rest of the performance information would have to be available to traveless at airports and publicized by the Department of Transportation.

Hungarians will be able to travel to the West as often as they wish beginning in January, the official Hungarian news agency MTI reported.

At present, Hungarians may travel to the West only once every three years, or annually if they receive invitations.

Sudan's national carrier, Sudan Airways, has suspended all flights for 10 days starting nn Friday to allow for a major overhaul of its services, the state-run radio reported.

SDI: Soviet Military Chief Foresees an Imperiled Moscow

(Coothsued from Page 1) this issue appears to be in contrast to those of some Soviet political leaders, who have expressed regret about the intervention.

• The Kremlin will make its first public accounting of its military budget, but not for two or three years. He acknowledged that the annual published figure for Soviet military spending — 20.2 billion rubles (about $30 billion) this year

- reflects only personnel, pen-sions, training and logistics, and does not include any of the money for development and acquisition of weapons.

Marshal Akhromeyev avoided answering several questions, the subjects of which included the number of Soviet soldiers killed and wounded in Afghanistan, the size of the Soviet military budget and his personal feelings about the prospect of defending the vast So-viet border with China if nuclear weapons are abolished. Marsbal Akhromeyev, who wears 10 rows of decorations and the gold star that marks a Hero of the Soviet Union, was genial and straightforward in conversation, but was careful not to go beyond tary decorum and service loyalty found in the Pentagon. He denied there was any waste in Soviet military spending. He scoffed at the idea of military resistance to Mr.

Gorbachev's arms control efforts.
Soviet political leaders like Mr. Gorbachev usually criticize Mr. Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, popularly known as "star wars," nn the ground that it would lead to a dangerous and economi-cally draining new arms race. Marshal Akhromeyev also made those points, but be underscored a different concern to explain the thinking of military planners. He portrayed Mr. Reagan's anti-missile defense program, which the president describes as an effort to neutralize the threat of nuclear weapons, as a deliberate attempt to for itself, and at the same time to cut down the number of strategic forces to a certain level, 6,000 warheads on each side," he said.

official Soviet pronouncements on most issues.

On some questions, he seemed bound by the same sense of military decorum and sensing legislations.

"Given this number of wathcad on each side," he said, "it is possible, at least in theory, to create a space-based nuclear shield."

Marshal Akhromeyev did not suggest that a space-based delease could successfully protect the limited States from a devastating stude ar attack. It was clear from his comments that he meant such & system would enable the United States to attack the Soviet Union and then fend off enough of the retaliatory strike to claim victory

To military strategists, such a theoretical advantage is itself enormously valuable, since it would give one side a psychological edge in a crisis.

Developing an effective SDI system in the absence of a long-range missile treaty, he said, would be cither impossible or will not become practical until the distant fu-

In Divisive Poll, House Votes $12 Billion in Tax Tages to Cut Deficit

By Jonathan Fuerbringer

bruising partisan fight that sent an accounting gimmicks. uncertain signal to Wall Street, the House of Representatives, by one sete, has reversed itself and approved $12 billion in tax increases m help reduce the federal deficit.

The vote Thursday night on the plan, which would cut the deficit by 514.4 billion, was 206-205. The Democratic leadership won only after holding the roll-call open beyond the usual 15 minutes and winning a last-second switch by Representative Jim Chapman, Democrat of Texas. As Speaker Jim Wright held the vote open, Republicans shouted bush league! and called for an end to the vote in one of the unruliest recent House votes. Only one Republican, Representative James M. Jeffords of Vermont, voted with 205 Democrats to pass the bill.

The slim victory for the Democratic leadership came after an embarrassing defeat earlier in the day for Mr. Wright, also a Texas Dem-ocrat, who had to employ a rarely used parliamentary maneuver to reverse the setback caused when 48

Democrats voted against him.
The initial defeat --- 217-203 on a procedural vote — sparked a day-long political confrontation of the kind that the White House and congressional leaders are trying to avoid as they work in separate neavoid as they work in separation of a budget compromise gonations on a budget compromise against of a signal of that they hope will send a signal of unity to the nervous financial mar-

Democratic leaders contended that the package is the basis of its negotiating position in those talks, which are aimed at reducing the deficit by at least $23 billion. But Republicans, who opposed the package's tax increases, and some Democrats argued that the timing of the plan was wrong, coming in the midst of the White House-congressional budget negotiations. In addition, they objected to including a major new spending program in the bill, a new welfare program that would cost $1.7 bil-ion over three years.

But the battle seemed less disraptive to the budget negotiations, which continued for the fourth day Friday, than to the relationship be-tween the parties in the House. The way the Democrats won Thursday could make it harder for both parties in the House to cooperate in approving a final compromise.

It has totally broken down cooperation between Democrats and Republicans," said Representative Connie Mack 3d, Republican of Florida. "I have absolutely no respect for Jim Wright."

The bill the House approved Thursday night now goes to the Senate, where leaders said it could be changed to incorporate whatever compromise plan may be worked out in the budget negotiations. If there is no agreement in those talks before Nov. 20, $23 billion in spending cuts demanded by the re-vised budget-balancing law will go into effect automatically.

The tax increases include an extension of the 3 percent telephone excise tax, a repeal of cuts in the top estate and gift tax rate, an end to the interest deduction for home mortgages over $1 million and the repeal of an accounting tax break used by defense contractors. The bill also includes a tax intended to discourage hostile corporate take-overs, which some investors say contributed to the market crash.

In the plan approved Thursday evening, $1.24 billion of the spending reductions for the 1988 fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, come from delaying the payment of some farm subsidies into the 1989 fiscal year. In addition, the package as-sumes a $962 million savings on pay increases because it includes a 3 percent instead of a 4 percent pay increase for civilian and military employees. And the package projects a savings of $29 million from the required labeling of frozen piz-zas that used artificial cheese.

The package also increases spending for Medicaid and in-cludes a host of special tax breaks that help projects or companies in many members' districts.

Aquino Tries to Allay Fears Over Terrorism

In remarks to foreign reporters, Mrs. Aquino also tried to allay the growing fears of her Southeast Asian neighbors that the instability and spiraling cycle of violence may make it too dangerous for Manila to press ahead with plans to bold a regional summit meeting scheduled or mid-December.

Several officials and diplomats from countries in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations have voiced reservations about traveling to Manila for the forum. The shootings of the three Americans were expected to reinforce those fears.

"The summit meeting will go through as mentioned in December," Mrs. Aquino said. She said Philippine security officials were already meeting with their counter-parts in the other five ASEAN captals and are "taking all measures to ensure that each head of state and head of government be given maximum protection."

The six ASEAN nations are the Philippines, Thailand, Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore and Brunei. Mrs. Aquino told the foreign re-porters she had not received a full report on the killings outside Clark

Brazil Poses a Dilemma

With the stock market's troubles, the dilemma of the Brazilian bank debts becomes more difficult. It has been eight tant of which is economic reform. Debt months since the Brazilians suspended payments on their debts, now more than $70 billion. About a third of it is owed to American banks, and under American rules the regulators now have to decide whether to require the banks to start writing it off.

To write it off reduces a bank's capital. Most of the major lenders to Brazil set up with the wbole financial structure under great strain, anything that constrains liquidity and the banking system's ability to keep lending normally is going to require very careful thought. There is also a risk that, as write-offs begin, some bank might try to recoup its loss by seizing Brazilian property — a ship's cargo, perhaps, or a plane. In present conditions, any disruption of trade would be harmful.

But the regulators cannot afford simply to ignore Brazil's refusal to pay. They do not wish to give the impression, either to borrowers or to banks, that there are no consequences of breaking commitments. Brazil wants concessions on its debts, but concessions are a form of foreign aid, and the donors are entitled to ask the recipients to respond by doing what they can to let their own economies work more efficiently. The Brazilian government, unfortunately, seems to regard this kind of condition as an infringement of the country's sovereignty and an assault on its national pride. Presispecial reserves last spring against that possibility, and until last week the regulators could have ordered them to write off 10 percent without any great concern. But with the whole financial structure under long President Sarney's term will last or even whether the country will continue to have presidential government. In the midst of this confusion it is difficult for Brazil to make policy on an issue as heavily freighted with emotion as the bank debts.

The regulators are reportedly trying to work out a temporary solution in which everyone gives a little—banks, Brazil, even the regulators themselves— in order to slide along for a while with no collisions and no write-offs. It will not solve anything, but in the circumstances perhaps that is the best solution - if it can be managed. -THE WASHINGTON POST.

Administration officials seem to be kick-President Reagan combatively showed himself unchastened by the Senate's embarrassing rejection of his first choice. To learn whether Douglas Ginsburg's nomination will prove as provocative as Robert Bork's we must await confirmation hearings, but the president's defiant tone is inauspicious.

"Let us all resolve that the process of confirming a Supreme Court nominee will never again be distorted." Mr. Reagan said on Thursday. But the Senate that voted against the Bork nomination by a decisive 58-to-42 vote needs no such correction. It tested that nomination with meticulous fairness and exhaustive hearings that intelligent-ly probed his record and philosophy.

Nor does the Senate need Mr. Reagan's spur to speedy action. The four-mouth delay in replacing the respected moderate Poweli with a confirmable candidate is the 'president's responsibility.

Judge Ginsburg, like Judge Bork, sits on the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington, D.C., but be has amassed much less of a record. That fulfills the prophecy of some Bork supporters that the next nominee would be less vulnerable to cross-examination based on prolific criticisms of the court. The Senate's challenge is to learn what it can about a nominee who, at age 41, has no Book of Bork to defend and may feel less need ing themselves for not pressing the Bork battle on ideological grounds. That seemed to underlie Mr. Reagan's remarks on Thursday about "the rights of the victims of crime and the rights of society."

The Senate is unlikely to be impressed either by the open ideology or by Judge Ginsburg's credentials as a crime fighter. In his brief career as law professor, government official and judge for 14 months, the offenses be has dealt with mainly concern anti-trust.

Is the president making good on his promise to nominate someone the Senate will dislike "just as much" as Judge Bork? Mr. Reagan displays a certain vengeful combativeness precisely by nominating someone so young, Judge Ginsburg would be the fifth youngest instice in history after James Iredell on the very first Supreme Court; William Johnson, a Jefferson ap-pointee; the fabled Joseph Story, a Madi-son appointee; and William O. Douglas, appointed by Franklin Roosevelt. Three of m served more than 30 years.

What brilliance and special experience would he bring to the court? Getting to know Douglas Ginsburg will have lasting importance. If he is confirmed, be might well be handing down judgments, Ronald Reagan's lasting legacy, in 2017.

Wives Win a Victory

It certainly must have been easier for the commanding officer stated his terms as if he U.S. military — and for the Foreign Service was not asking anything out of the ordinary national corporations, too — back nary. Packed up with the rest of the gear and shipped around from pillar to post, these women were in many cases treated like a valuable accessory. an unpaid extra who was assigned all kinds of tasks to be performed for the benefit of the company or the service. To make matters worse, a wife's performance in these tasks was often taken into account in determining her husband's career progress.

We thought those days were over — but we were wrong. Two Air Force wives recently complained about policies at Grissom Air Force Base in Indiana, and when those complaints became public, investigators found that their problem was not unique. These women held full-time civilian jobs, and m each case their busbands, mid-career officers in the Air Force, had been told that they would not be promoted unless their wives quit their jobs. Nothing subtle here. The busy right here on the base and they are expected to volunteer to do it. The predictable and justified protests — is the Air Force caught in some kind of a time warp? — from those familiar with the realities of women's rights, economic necessities and family relationships in the America of 1987 resulted in an Air Force investigation, a congressional inquiry and, this week, a new order from the Department of Defense, Secretary Caspar Weinberger announced that from now on the department will not inter-fere in a spouse's decision to work, stay at home or volunteer. That is a good ruling. The point is not that all service wives want to work outside the home or that great numbers of them do not do extremely valuable volunteer community service on their own time. What was wrong here was the assumption on the part of their busbands' employer that it could command service from a spouse and forbid paid employment. - THE WASHINGTON POST.

Restore Egypt to the League

The question of readmitting Egypt to the Arab League may or may not be on the official agenda at the League summit which opens in Amman on Nov. 8. It will certainly be the chief topic backstage. The small Gulf states, which have been left feeling vulnerable by the Gulf crisis, would like Egypt's return. They would like to feel protected by a nation of substantial military capacity.

Formal readmission is unlikely. Saudi Arabia, which will be the moving spirit at the summit, does not care for decisions which are not unanimous, and there is no sign that Syria is ready to forgive Egypt for its sepa-rate peace with Israel, the treaty which occasioned Cairo's dismissal in 1979. The Gulf states will, however, have another option. They can follow Jordan in restoring full diplomatic ties with Egypt even if it remains excluded from the Arab League. In so doing, they would only be giving official recognition to their unofficial relations with Cairo.

The isolation has now almost gone, except in name. However, Egypt's return to the Arab League would strengthen the moderate camp against the extremists. It is also an essential preliminary step toward the Arabs adopting a unified policy toward the Middle East peace process. This is rea-son enough for the West to encourage the moderates to end Egypt's formal isolation. - The Times (London).

Hard Choices for Reagan

Critical choices must be made about the defense budget. Many new weapons systems in the grab bag pushed by President Reagan have reached the transition between development and production. There is not enough gold in Fort Knox (or in the future paychecks of American taxpayers) to produce them all at once. The president faces unpalatable choices. Even if he agrees with Congress on a budget resolution that includes new taxes, the Pentagon budget must be cut. If he doesn't accept new taxes, the Gramm-Rudman cuts will take effect automatically.

If choices are not made now, Mr. Reagan's successor, whether Republican or Democrat, will face a management nightmare.

In the Gulf, Too, the Soviet Union Is on the Move

By Robert G. Neumann This is the second of two articles.

WASHINGTON — In the Gulf region, the Soviet Union has played on Arah fears of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini with considerable skill, although without as yet achieving outstanding results.

somewhat America's course. At the same time Moscow has been careful to keep as many avenues as possible open to Tehran, especially in new trade ventures and economic projects.

The Soviets have been opportunists in the Gulf. They have sought to benefit from American mistakes or overreaction, such as the U.S. reflagging of Kuwaiti tankers.

Auwait has long tried to get the superpowers involved in the Gulf war.

if only as a signal to Iran to lay off. The long and inexplicable American silence to a Kuwaiti reflagging request was broken only after the calamitous impact of Washington's "Irangate" caused the Kuwaitis to make a comparable request to the Soviets — who acceded speedily, albeit in a low-key manner and with limited resources. Washington responded massively.
U.S. naval action has made the Iranians cautious, But while probably incapable of inflicting major damage on U.S. forces, they still stir the first enough to keep the U.S. Congress unsettled and the U.S. public divided.

The Arab Gulf states have now come around to regarding the U.S. reflagging and escorring action as positive. But those states know that they will have to live with a powerful Iran, whatever the face of the regime in Tehran. They are nervously pleased to be supported by America's might, but they are not eager for confrontation.

Thus they are ready to offer the United States access to whatever facilities it needs on a discreet, case-bycase basis. But if Washington is foolish enough to ask for official and permanent base rights, then its diplomacy will cross the invisible line between the possible and the politically unacceptable — and send the Arabs turning to the Soviets as the more flexible and "moderate" balancers.

The Arabs also constantly ask if the United States is at long last going to stay the course. They have not forgotten how it proclaimed the "vital im-portance" of its interests in Lebanon. only to pull out abruptly soon after. They are still shaken by the Iran-contra affair. They nervously bear alarmist speeches in Congress and are aware of the considerable American popular uneasiness over Gulf policy.

All this has allowed the Soviets to present themselves, ever so carefully, as potential peacemakers in the Iran-lina war. If America has long chained to be uniquely capable of peacemaking in the Arab-Israeli dispute because it has credibility on both sides, the concentration of the present themselves, ever so carefully, as potential peacemakers in the Iran-lical war. Army training has been upgraded. An extensive system of demies and schools has been established to produce new generations of technically competent pro-fessional officers who leave politics to the party's civilian leaders.

Another low-cost area of modernization has been the reorganiza-tion and streamlining of the PLA structure, which began in 1985. Thousands of senior officers jobs have been eliminated. At least 25 percent of the one million men who had lost their jobs in the PLA by last April were reported to be officers, many of them aging peasants who had been guerrilla lighters. Removing their influence has been a slow and politically delicate process since Mr. Deng first called upon "veteran revolutionaries of the older generation" to step aside in 1978. Several generations of senior officers must be retired to break up their networks of influence and connections, a process that only time and death can complete.

Without support from some high-ranking officers, military reform could not have progressed as far as it has. Xn Xiangqian and Nie Rongzhen, the two remaining marshals of the PLA, have generally backed modernization. They and navy commander, Liu Huaqing, helped shape the reforms and then

Modern Washington Has Been Prone to Stalemate

PARIS — The chief reason the United States has drifted into market crash, and risks sinking into recession or worse, is that American government is powerless to act when an irreconcilable conflict exists between the president and Congress.

Such a conflict has existed for years on budget and tax policy. Congress would not yield to Ronald Reagan on how to cut expenditure, and the president would not yield to Congress on raising taxes. Thus nothing was done - except to borrow money, mainly from Japan, to pay the ex-penses of American government. As things now stand, even when president and Congress agree on a common objective, as they have on cutting the deficit, action is blocked when there is disagreement on method. This is a basic problem of American government. It has grown steadily worse during the last two decades.

For 15 of the last 19 years, Congress and the executive branch have been controlled by opposed political parties. This was not generally the case before. The House of Representatives - the popular house, and the one in which revenue bills must originate was in Republican hands from 1901 to 1911 and again from 1917 to 1933, for all but two years of that time under Republican presidents.

Democratic Party control existed during six of Woodrow Wilson's eight years as president, and was reestablished with Franklin Delano Roosevelt's election in 1932, continuing until 1947. The Democrats re-claimed the House in the 1948 election. The Republicans took control when Dwight Eisenhower became president in 1953, but the Democrats

By William Pfaff

Thus, from the beginning of the century to World War II, only Wood-row Wilson, in the last two years of his presidency, faced a hostile House, But since 1945 every president except Laboratory. since 1945 every president except John Kennedy and Jimmy Carter has, for at least a part of his term in the White House, been at odds with Congress.

This postwar American taste for electing Republican presidents and Democratic Congresses obviously coincides with the equally modern phenomenon of blocked and frustrated presidencies, and of presidential at-tempts to circumvent Congress — to. or near, the point of crime, in the Nixon and Reagan cases.

Is there anything to be done? Elect Democratic presidents as well as Democratic congressmen, a Democrat might say. But the one completed modern Democratic presidency, Mr. Carter's, was not a great success, either. Are there structural changes that might be made? Should they be made? Several proposals have been offered. A simple but potentially far-reaching reform would be to change the congressional term from two years to four, and the Senate term from six years to eight, making both coincide with presidential terms.

Congress generally is willing to go along with a fresh and popular presi-dent when his mandate is new. Under the present arrangement, when two years have passed and the popular vote shifts away from him in the midterm election, as it nearly always of checks and balances, and that if we been that much good at controlling the votes of their members in Congress, so as to contribute to disciplined government. Even presidential candidates get nominated these days by running against, not with, their parties — as George McGovern, Jianny Carter and Ronald Resign all did, and as Gary Hort almost did in 1984 Hart almost did in 1984.

There are several ways to strengthen party authority, among them making sitting senators and congressmen un-committed delegates at the party con-ventions, and putting much stricter limits on the length of political campaigns. Under the current arrange-ment, a congressman is not a legislator who runs for office every two years, but a man or woman permanently running for office who intermittently clears a day or two to legislate.

Above all, the cost of running for office must be cut, to drastically reduce the power of political action committees and other single-issue campaign contributors. The simple way to do it is to mandate equal and federally financed or public-service television and radio time for every qualified candi-date. This would slash the need for big money, and strengthen party influence

An argument can be made, of course, that the very nature of American constitutional government is one does, congressional cooperation dwindles or ends. Consolidating presidential and congressional terms would than balance, this may be just as well for the health of the republic. King

Log, sommolent (in the fable), may be better for the liberties of the citizen than powerful and activist King Stork, who gobbled up all the little frogs. But in that case, Americans had better begin asking small favors from their government rather than great plishments. You don't rule the accor world economy, or even your own, or properly play the superpower politico-strategic game, with a political system geared to stalemate.

These Are Hard Days For Reagan

By Lou Cannon

W ASHINGTON — This is a most difficult time for Ronald Reading and He is being pushed by financial a crisis to a tax policy he abhors and by the logic of diplomacy toward a supersthe summisely opened a second from which the Senate on another controversial, superst for Mr. Reagan's declimated presidency do not seem bright.

But the strain of these public conflicts is secondary to the president.

flicts is secondary to the president, whose private life has become rimmed. by the sorrows of Nancy Reagan. The Reagans are close beyond any normal measure. He spent much of October measure. He spent much of October comforting Nancy Reagan during her battle with cancer, as she had comforted him. He told her of the death of her mother. He hates to fly, but he flew with her to Phoenix and came back again himself that night because be had work to do the next day. At week's end be flew back to Phoenix to help his wife mourn Edith Luckett Davis, who had also been a friend to him.

had also been a friend to him.

Throughout most of his life, Mr.
Reagan has comforted others in time of sorrow. "Love is never wasted, love is never lost," he told the weeping families of 248 Americans who died in Newfoundland plane crash in 1985. But that was a public event. It is more important to know that he regularly writes letters and makes telephone calls to persons who have lost loved. ones, even when the cameras are off. In two decades of writing about Mr. Reagan, I have heard from time to time after some tragedy that he had telephoned or written a person he newer knew. The disclosures usually came from the recipients of the calls and letters, for Mr. Reagan made it a point not to publicize them. I made notes and stored the information, as journal-ists are trained to do. We always think that the bell tolls for someone else.

When my mother died several years ago, the president called to offer con-dolences. I thanked him and said that her death had been expected and that I had thought I was prepared for it, but that it had really hit quite hard. "You are never prepared for the death of your mother." he said softly. It seemed to me — and still seems — about the most sensible and kindly thing that could be said. It also struck me that Mr. Reagan was talking in a different voice without a script.

Mr. Reagan reminisced about his dress last February. Horace Busby observed that this was rare for Mr. Reagan in a public speech, "unlike other presidents who have summoned up memories of their mothers with little provocation. This underscored what is often overlooked: He has been, by far, the most private of presidents, allowing little to be known of him."

It may be that one of the secrets of Mr. Reagan's political success is that this private Reagan comes through somehow to Americans in ways that are imperfectly understood. I don't know, I do know that Mr. Reagan; who has spent most of his life in the spotlight, is an astonishingly private person who conceals his griefs and does not discuss his fears. It must cost him a lot in this time, when his wife is suffering and his friend Mike Deaver is on trial. One wonders sometimes if even Mr. Reagan's huge store of optimism and self-reliance is large enough to keep him going.

Reporters are taught to set aside their feelings. At the Reagan White House, if they work for television networks, they also learn the art of shoutworks, they also learn the art of shouting questions at a president who seeks:
to avoid answering them. This art form, not particularly ennobling for either side, is complicated further by Mr. Reagan's hearing difficulties.

As the president left for Phoenix last week, CBS White House correspondent. Bill Blanta should be should be supported.

spondent Bill Plante shouted condonces to him. Others joined in. The president, thinking they were shouring questions about the summit, kept walking Later, when an aide explained to him what had happened, he laughed about it and was pleased that others cared enough to comfort him.
He is in need of that now. It is a most difficult time for the Reagans.

1887: Brokers Complain

LONDON - The brokers notice that within the past fortnight unusual job lots of stocks, especially of Americans, have been purchased outright. Buying on margins, or selling on borrowed securities, has not been as rife as in the past. They do not welcome this. It is speculation, and especially its first step, which brokers like. For months the public has been quite indisposed to speculate, and account after account, the volume of business which has to be adjusted at the end of settlements has been shrinking. Nevertheless brokers and dealers represent that the markets are in a much sounder condition than for a long while.

He pointed out that if this propagand da succeeded and France was obliging to send troops to the colonies, then the country would be in a weakened position to oppose the dictators.

For Nakasone, an Unconvincing Sayonara

By Clyde Haberman New York Times Service
TOKYO — "Let me join you from now on as a private," Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone told members of his ruling party the nther day.

Without so much as a blink, Mr. Nakasone segued from the military metaphor to one borrowed from tennis. "I will concentrate on being ya ball boy," he said.

While none of his fellow party nembers laughed outright, none lok him seriously either. But Japanese custom dictates that no leader should strut off the stage, And so Mr. Nakasone, with such flashes of uncharacteristic modesty, stepped down quietly Friday after five dynamic years as president of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party.

His presence is likely to be felt especially in foreign policy, his specialty and an area where Mr. Takeshita is weak.

If the Japanese press is correct, the incoming prime minister will soon pick a trusted Nakasone lieutenant, prohably Takao Fujinami, to be his foreign minister. In addition. Mr. Nakasone plans to form an institute for strategic studies, from which he will presumably issue pronouncements on a favorite theme: Japan must play a global role commensurate with its vast economic power.

Speaking to a group of foreign reporters Thursday, the departing prime minister said he had advised Mr. Takeshita, "Be yourself." But it was also clear that he does not for long.

He has been a vigorous prime minister, and politicians and government of the follow want his successor to take the admonition too literally. "I'm convinced Mr. Takeshita will follow

International Herold Tribiane SINGAPORE - Australia. folowing requests from the United States, has for the first time applied strict international controls to prevent diversion of military-related high technology to Communist countries. Western officials said Friday.

And, in Singapore, the controls were used to block acquisition of advanced computers by companies that have close connections with the Soviet Union and its allies in Eastern Europe, the officials said. Australia and Singapore are the leading users and manufacturers nl computer technology in the Asia-

Pacific region after Japan. Western diplomats in Singapore said that the United States had sought ecoperation in the region to impose stricter controls on technol-

Washington was concerned, they said, that Soviet bloc agents were trying in circumvent tighter surveillance on the movement of sensitive technology from Western Europe by seeking to acquire the material in the Far East.

In Australia, officials said that the son of a Hungarian diplomat ordered to leave the country recently had attempted to fly out Japanese and U.S. computer equipment that is prohibited from export.

Toshiba Reports It Lost Money

TOKYO — The Toshiba Ma-chine Co., the Japanese company penalized for exporting strategic technology to the Soviet Union, said Friday that it lost money for the first time in 10

The company reported losses of 185 million yen ($1.33 miltion) for the six months ended in September, after profits of 793 million yen in the same period last year.

The company, a subsidiary of the Toshiba Corp., said the the loss was a result of a government export ban that cut its shipments to Communist countries to a trickle. The government imposed the one-year ban in May. The United States had complained that Toshiba Machine's exports of advanced milling machines had allowed Moscow to develop submarines with quieter propellers.

As required under U.S. law, IBM Singapore, a wholly-owned subsidiary of IBM of New York, applied the model ordered by SinSov, Mrs. sary licensing requirements to

ARTS/LEISURE

Spanish Art, From El Greco to Picasso to 1987

By Michael Gibson International Herald Tribune

PARIS — The peculiar and yet clusive flavor of the Spanish sensibility is a haunting presence all through four exhibitions devoted to five centuries of Spanish art at the Perit Palais and the Musée d'Art Moderne de la Ville de Paris.

"From El Greco to Picasso," a sumptuous exhibition at the Petit Palais, presents more than 150 works by nearly 70 artists including Velázquez, Ribera, Zurbaran, Murillo and an interesting array of less imposing talents. The stars of the show are represented by some major works - El Greco, for instance, by 11 paintings including "The Baptism of Christ," "Christ Driving the Merchants Out of the Temple" and "The Agony in the Garden." There are some excellent items by Velazquez ("Aesop" and the dwarf "Il Primo," for instance) while Goya is impressively repre-sented hy more than 20 paintings, many of the first magnitude including portraits, scenes of witchcraft and genre scenes —though this last term sounds somewhat impertinent when applied to paintings of the intensity of "Maja and Celestina at the Balcony" or "Lazarillo de Tormes." Under his extraordinary brushstrokes, as mundane a subjectas a dead turkey somehow manages to radiate a fateful dignity.

It is particularly interesting, in this context, to see Vicente Lopez's portrait of Goya at the age of 80. 11 reveals a penetrating glance, as forceful as Picasso's, but more perceptive, and a willful expression of the mouth. Lopez, incidentally, was Goya's successor as painter to the

African Sculpture From the Colonial Era

PARIS — Every now and then the art market provides insights into art forms that never found their way into museums. The revelation this week at Drouot was Afnican sculpture in the early colonial

A striking group of these were briefly seen at the Saturday viewing that preceded an auction held on Four of five large pieces, plus about 30 smaller wood figures, which were occasionally more remarkable still as works of art, emerged out of the 136 items. A good deal of the rest consisted of Airport Art, as African art buffs have come to call the gaudily painted carvings done in recent years in a style attempting to copy traditional masks and idols. The incongruous mix might have harmed the great pieces had

But, far more intriguing than the questions of where and when is the mystery of their purpose. Collectors and dealers familiar with Africa agree that carvings such as these were done by the Baules for themselves, not for Europeans with whom they had as yet limited contact.

The extraordinary thing is that the artists with no previous expo-sure to the outside world should have so easily integrated into their repertoire new motifs and, above all, so promptly devised a new aesthetic language. The shock of surprise sent the Baule standing man rading in the uniform worn by Afri-zooming to 31,239 francs (about can fusiliers. A rigid red collar tops $5,340). Within a very short time, probahly 20 years or so, a whole range of intermediary phases between African traditional and a new figurative art were developed. Another Ashanti figure of an officer, sold for 5,649 francs, combines an almost purely African mask for the face - high angular cheekbones, closed eyes - with a European posture and costume for the body. Here the sculptor has gone one step further away from the tradition. The white man is rep-resented seated on a chair, one leg crossed over the other, his right hand pressed against his belt, his left forearm resting on his thigh. The well-observed posture strongly suggests that the sitter was actually . This is a portrait that fits nowhere into the native African tradition. Surprisingly, the han-dling of the body reminds one of Modigliani's perception of his sit-ters, with their curving elastic-looking limbs. The expression, with big dilated eyes, pressed thin lips that increase the glare, exudes a mixture of smugness and triumphant ferocity. It is as good as the best in 20thcentury Western art. Despite its astonishing parallelism, the carving still retains something of the tradi-tional modeling of the human face at the hands of African sculptors.

Nothing of the sort survives in the standing figure of a felt-hatted ranger, legs apart, water flask dan-gling on his hip, that was carved by an anonymous artist of the Meade people in Sierra Leone. The squat sleek figure betrays a remarkable accuracy in the observation of military costume, including the two crossed leather straps over the short-sleeved shirt, the two knives in their sheath, the boots. The one odd detail is the African necklace tightly circling around the man's neck. The expression makes it a masterpiece of suggestive three-dimensional portraying. Gleeful brutishness about sums it up. It touched a cord in the attendance as it rose to an unprecedented 68,188 francs. The diversity that was revealed by the Drouot sale in a sampling numbering less than 40 significant works is surprising. Together with the ability to perform on unfamiliar lines, innovate, and create bril-liantly, it leaves no doubt about the fantastic potential that Africa had at that time. Has that potential survived? Looking at the appalling derivative work done in the last 20 years or so, bordering on parody and rarely avoiding vulgarity, one cannot be sure. The best hope hies in the immensity of a continent, its diversity and its many relatively untouched areas.

The reaction of the Western public was hardly less revealing than the art that provoked it. Dealers and collectors of traditional African art did not touch it. The response came from those concerned with 20th-century art. Measured by their standards, the works they were buying were going for peanuts even if prices for the top lots were huge compared with those paid hitherto. In the smaller lots, a few wonderful objects could be picked up in the 1,500-to-3,000-franc range. The U.S. dealer Jerome Eisenberg was the main buyer. The owner of the Royal Athena galler-ies in New York and Beverly Hills, California, he usually deals in anuquives from the ancient Mediteran world, Greece and Rome and has now started branching off into Western European sculpture of the Middle Ages. Eisenberg bought 37 percent of the lots. Asked about his plans, he grin-ned. I have no idea. I just loved it."

Penelope Lively Wins Booker

The Associated Press LONDON — Penelope Live-ly won Britain's most pres-tigious award for fiction, The Booker Prize, for her book "Moon Tiger," a woman's reflections on her troubled life as she lies dying in a hospital. The prize carries an award of £15,000 (about $25,800). The choice Thursday was unexpected. Lively, 54, had been given only an outside chance by most critics. She entered the competition this year for a third time. Her two previous works that failed to win were "The Road To Lichfield" (1977) and According To Mark" (1984).

Van Gogh's Rooftops in The Hague (watercolor-gouache) counts as one of the first indications of the artist's mature mastery. In a letter to his brother and staunchest supporter Theo, dated July 1882, Vari Gogh cites Rooftops as the fruit of his determination to progress in drawing, perspective and proportion. The banal scene - red roofs, smoking chimneys, worksites and fields - is lent a sinister note by the stark black outline of a crow against a sky that Van Gogh termed "as silent and peaceful as one by Coror."

Among three works by Amedeo Modigliani are two highly rated female portraits, La Belle Romaine and Femme à La Cravate Noire (1917). A tentative 50 million francs has been touted as a possible price for the Van Gogh and at least one of Modigliani's ladies (the Cravate Noire should outsell the Belle Romaine). La Conversation by Matisse shouldn't be far off that sum and looks certain to surpass the record (equivalent to 11 million francs) established for this artist in the U.S. in 1985. A bare-chested Jeune Femme Assise (1835-40), though smaller and less meticulous, provides a more faithful image of the painter's originality with its subdued interplay of white, gray and pale flesh-pink. Early 19th century French art is represented by two other paintings: Géricault's Mare chal-Ferrant Anglait and one of the famous series of Odalisques by Ingres. From a historical point of view, the sale's next principal artraction is a blue-and-greendominared Cézanne warercol-

A frampily realistic 1897 pastel portrait of Beatrice Tapie de Celeyran is Toulouse-Lautrec's contribution to the proceedings, while the Douznier Rousseau makes an unaccuscomed appearance at auction with two pictures, including a key work from his first period, Port d'Alger.

The better of two Vuillards is a soft, intimate scene enotled La Chambre Bleue (1910), depicting a kimono-clad woman next to a dressing table. A beautiful street-scene (Rue à Auteuil) by Utrillo, painted just a couple of years later, could set a record with around 3 million francs; five times the sum usually required to not works by this prolific artist.

Other highlights include Braque's somber Barques Echouées sur la Plage à Varengeville (1938), and a powerful Remorqueur sur la Meuse (1948) by Van Dongen. A superb lifesize bronze of Eze, by Rodin, is thrown in for good measure. (A videocassette presenong all the works in the sale is available.)

How much will the entire collection draw? The overall figure could reach 400 million francs with the Japanese, Arabs and Gerry foundation setting the pace.

Who was Georges Renand?

Georges Renand (1879-1968) was a born-and-bred Parisian with a head for business and an eye for art.

Twenty years with the Crédit Lyonnais taught bim finance, but he quit banking in 1922 to join the famous Samaritaine department store. Six years later he took over as joint boss along with friend and fellow picture-lover Gabriel Cognacq.

The move to the Samaritaine coincided with Renand's first forays into the art-market. A Bonnard nude launched what, over the next forty years, was to become a fabulous, varied collection of 19th and 20th century paintings, Whim, fancy and the flair of an instinctive connoisseur dictated Renand's choice.

Georges Renand left behind over 300 works at his death. Fifty of the best are up for sale in Paris on November 20. It promises to be the most important auction in the French capital since Gabtiel Cognacq's own collection came under the hammer - back in 1952.

Curtain up on Drouot-Montaigne

N November 20, Paris will welcome a new auction venue: the Théâtre des Champs-Elysees, near the Plaza Achenée on the stylish Avenue Montaigne.

Auctions in a theater? Well, not any old auctions just the most prestigious of the Paris season. And not any old theater - the Théatre des Champs-Elysées has recently emerged from a 100 millionfrane facelift, resplendent in Belle Epoque glory and crammed with the technology needed to function as a multipurpose arts center. The Champs-Elysées was designed by Belgian architect Henry Van Velde and opened both its pioneering use of reinforced concrete - then virtually unknown - and magnificent interiot decoration. Leading contemporary artists Antoine Bourdelle, Maurice Denis and Edouard Vuillard covered the walls with mighty frescoes. Glass maestro René Lalique designed art nouveau chandeliers. Little wonder that the theater became - in 1957 - France's first 20th century building to be classified as an

The new venue, to be known officially as Drouot-Montaigne, should do wonders for the Drouot's prestige and credibility. The ambidous Joël-Marie Millon, President of the city's commissures-priscurs, aims to put Paris firmly on the international auction map. Acquiring such a sumptuous saleroom is a fine start. Further sales — of the quality of the inaugural, eagerly awaited Renand Collection should follow.

WATERSHED in art market histoty. 1992 will see the inevitable clash of two different auction systems.

French aucooneers (commissaires-priseurs) are appointed by the State and have a number of civil obligations. Take, for instance, the thirty-year authenticity guarantee that applies to any object acquited at auction in

Until World War II and even, in fact, during the immediate post-war years, France remained the world's leading zuction center. All the great collections invariably passed through Paris, where the heftiest bids were registered, painters' market-value evaluared, and reputations made or

Today things are rather different. Sotheby's and Christie's - followed recently by Phillips - have set up offices in the French capital and, over the years, gradually acquired sizeable chunks of the market. Result: France's artistic hericage is systemaocally plundered and the finest items removed to London - 2 partern fostered also, it is true, by less onerous art-sale taxation in England

In 1992, however, the full application of the Treaty of Rome should see the removal of numerous trade barriers with free competition becoming the rule and a fierce cross-Channel struggle in prospect.

Joël-Marie Millon, President of the Drouot Commissaires-Priscurs for the last two years, discussed the situation as it stands today and revealed his plans for the future of his beloved profession.

The post-1992 period will see major changes in your profession. What measures do you intend to take to counter British auction houses as they step up the pres-

We are all determined to restore Paris to the place it deserves on the world art marker. Starting in November, Paris will boast a prestigious new saleroom, Drouot-Montaigne, in the Théâtre des Champs Elysées on the Avenue Montaigne. The Paris auction scene has become more dynamic and this requires an increase of "prestige sales": the only way to interest the media and thereby capture the public's imagination. If we are to progress, Paris needs to have an image of efficiency and high performance.

Even if this means giving up the single-venue policy so popular with buyers and collectors from France and abroad? Don't forget that, in the past, prestige sales in Paris have been held at the Palais Galliera and the Palais d'Orsay. Today the former is the Museum of Fashion and Costume, while the latter has become the famous Musée d'Or-52y, devoted to the 19th century as all art-lovers know. The site, layout and services of our usual sales venue, Drouor-Richelieu, are fine for day-today sales but no longer meet the demands of international clients - he they buyers or sellers - attracted by our prestige sales. Today, such 2 top-level public demands that the setting, atmosphere and range of services live up to the image of a capital like Paris. All of their requirements will be met ar the Théatre des Champs-Elysées.

The treaty of Rome will be fully applied in 1992. It calls for the free circulation of goods and people within the European Community. This will help competitors from other member-countries to see up in France and to exercise professions which, like yours, are currently protected Donn't that עיסורן איסינו

We will certainly need to harmonize the status of members of our profession. In France auctioneers are considered 25 "referees" between two parties; elsewhere they are tradesmen. But there must also be a reduction of the existing disparities concerning auction taxes: these are crippling in France when compared to, say, the United Kingdom. This situation cannot cuntinue. What do you mean by "need to barmonize our status"? Might you be prepared to abandon your role as State-appointed officials?

We are considering the need to change our status, which dates from the 16th century, but I must underline that it would make sense for us to keep our role as referee between seller and buyet, guaranteeing our customers 2 real public service; this should not prove impossible. Links between the commissaires-priseurs must be tightened. The French are highly individualist by nature, but dence would be our downfall. It is vital that - grouped together under the name of "Drouot" - we present 2 unired front powerful enough to resist the multifarious dangers embodied by foreign aucnon houses. Drouor-Monraigne aims to achieve this via permanent facilities, highly qualified personnel and services equal to anything provided by the British or Americans. Hammers in Competition

⊀HE buzz from Paris has rarely been so positive. Under the energetic leadership of Joël-Marie Millon, the city's auctioneers are making unprecedented efforts to convince the public and the media of their international competitivity.

That means matching the pace ser by London and New York for modern paintings especially the headline-hogging Impressionist and Post-Impressionist schools. Van Gogh broke all records in London last March with £24.75 million for Sunflowers. Following that, Le Pont de Trinquetaille drew over £12 million in June In 1986 the top international bid was £7 million for Manet's Rue Mosnier aux Paveurs - again in London. Compared to these prices, Drouot's record of 13.8 million francs, established in June for Monet's Bouquet of Chrysanthemums, seems less than sensacional.

Yet it was the first time the 10-million franc barrier had been broken. The Paris art market received a psychological boost and now awaits the Renand sale in November with increased confidence. The Monet record is certain to prove short-lived and may be left far behind.

Ader-Picard-Tajan, the leading auction house in Paris, is renowned for its sales of Claude Monet, "Bouquet de Fleurs" (1878), 54 x 72 cm signed and dated lower left, auctioned June 23, 1987 at Hôtel Drouot for 13.8 million francs (Boscher et Studer). auction practices seem to be modern pictures, which account for a quarter of its annugetting more and more dubial turnover of around 400 milous." He cites the notorious lion francs. Partner Jean-Louis tales of unbought paintings must concentrate on modern rumors of cut-throat competiart to affirm its international tion to gain works that will credibility. "The competition attain "world record" prices. between Paris, London and The result? Would-be sellers refuse to contemplate the New York to attract potential sellers basically concerns prespossibility of saleroom failure and set exaggerated minimum tige items only, and modern paintings most of all. The or "reserve" prices for their Renand sale could be a turnworks. Embarrassing "buyinging point. We need to regain in" (unsold) percentages often follow. Picture sales in the confidence of French sell-Paris resist such delusions of grandeur and the Drouot's an-"Confidence" is a recurring nual buying-in rate works out theme in Picard's analysis. "People can start to doubt, at a respectable 15 percent. very quickly," he says, "and Picard also cites the recent

"defections" of Eric Turquin and Marc Blondeau from Sotheby's as an indication that "clearly all is not perfect amongst the British ranks." Turquin, an old master expert. and Blondeau, one of the world's leading authorities on Impressionism, have both moved to Paris, where Turquin has already collaborated with Ader-Picard-Tajan;

"I feel much less inhibited here," explains Turquin, "In London you're part of a very big system, a lot of people have left because they didn't want to be a simple employ-

Marc Blondeau also sees the positive side of the Paris Art Market. "All credit to Jöel-Marie Millon for recognizing the need for commissaire-priseurs to group together. The Renand sale should boost morale. It certainly is the best in Paris in the last thirty years."

Turquin continues: "Commissaires-priseurs are not waiting for the law to change - they are changing things of their own accord. And this is where the pictures are! There will be some outstanding old masters in Paris this season, including superb works by Veronese and Van Baburen,"

While the Drouot attempts to increase its supply of top-ranking modern paintings, it can already bank on a steady presence of quality works by minor impressionists and sought-after 20th century French-based artists. The 2.3 million francs taken last year for Eugène Boudin's Venetian view of La Salute, Début du Grand Canal Was 2 record for the artist. The commercially popular Foujita, Marquet, Laurencin and Duly are seldom absent from Paris salerooms. After years of price stagnation, the street-scenes of the prolific Utrillo and Vlaminck have been showing signs of resurgence. Paris has clout in other domains: old master pictures; 18th century French furniture; obiets de vertu; books and manuscripts; Islamic art; French silverware; and coins. In 1986, the most expensive old master in Paris was an early 15th century Annunciation, attributed to the circle of Gentile da Fabriano, ar 3.2 million francs. The best price

Toulouse-Lautrec. These sales are scheduled for November 22, just two days after Joël-Marie Millon inaugurates the new thezter venue with the blockbuster Renand collection. The stage is set for the most important 48 bours in Drouor's history.

Gearing Up for 1992

T is widely agreed that France in general, and Paris in particular, no longer dominates the internarional art market — and hasn't for twenty years. Yet last year's net revenue from zucoons in Paris exceeded 1.566 billion francs, up nearly 10 percent on 1985. Sales of paintings, furniture and works of art (vintage cars included) represent almost 85 percent of the Paris sales volume and more than 60 percent of total auction revenue in France. Not so long ago, auctions of paintings, furniture and works of art were attended only by dealers, collectors and connoisseurs. Now they attract an increasing number of private buyers. But the best paintings, furniture and works of art, are to be found in salerooms in London, New York, Geneva, Monaco and even Hong Kong.

Why has Paris declined? For one thing, auctions take. place where the largest oumber of wealthy potential buyers can be attracted. But this is not the only reason: private buyers and representatives of museums or artistic foundaoons don't hesitate to come to Paris if the pictures or objects available are sufficiently important. The root cause of the Paris decline is cost. Vendors turn to London, New York or Geneva when they have works for sale of international quality. French commissaires-priseurs have stepped up their attempts to become more competitive, but all their ef-

ing. The present French government, committed to economic liberalism, can solve the problem. But, like most governments, it is reluctant to relinquish such a valuable source of revenue.

Buyers' costs are virtually the same wherever the auction is held; an extra 1-2 percent is hardly likely to deter a collector willing to pay 5 million francs for a picture estimated at 2.5 million francs.

But whereas Sotheby's, Christic's, Phillips and other international auction houses receive 10 percent on sales (except for VAT where appopriate), French commissairespriseurs pay 7 percent in registration duty back to the state. This is the crux of the matter: British auction houses make considerably more profit from the buyer, enabling them to offer more attractive terms to the vendor and so secure prestige collections which, in turn, attract other major collections. In 1992, with the creation of a single European market, the different sale conditions existing in the European comtheory, British auction houses will be able to hold sales in France, while the French commissaires-priscurs should be able to hold sales elsewhere in the Community on an equal fiscal footing. But if the French government fails to act between now and 1992, the gap between the French and English-speaking markets could broaden and become difficult, if not impossible, for the French to close.

Upcoming Sales in Paris

Ader-Picard-Tajan

With its recent sales in Tokyo, annual sales in Monaco and offices in New York, Lausanne, Tokyo and Monaco, Ader-Picard-Tajan is firmly established outside France. Turnover figures have progressed rapidly over recent years, especially in the field of modern paintings: 37 million francs in 1985, 70 million francs in 1986 and a projected 120 million francs for 1987.

Ader-Picatd-Tajan also holds the world record price for an item of furniture: 16,650,000 francs for a Louis XVI Beneman-stamped cabiner, formerly the property of Louis XV's daughter Adélaide and housed in the Château of Versailles. It was sold in Monaco in November 1984 and has since been returned to Versailles by its new owner. November 22: Ader-Picard-

Tajan is staging three sales at Ecce Homo; old masters, in-Drouot-Montaigne on this date. The Modern Paintings are led by Moner's Arbres au Bord de L'East (1885), Pissarto's Verger à Pontoise (1877) and works by Braque, Dufy and Boudin. The Old Master sale boasts two works by Francesco Guardi and one by Fragonard, while highlights of the Furniture & Objets d'Art include mounted porcelain and 18th century Strasbourg

Audap-Godean-Solanet

December 16: Major works by Salvador Dali are rarely seen at auction in Europe, so his Composition (1926, modified in the mid-30s) should attract considerable attention. Other highlights of a varied sale; good 19th and 20th century French paintings (Vlaminck, Marisse and Chasseriau) with, notably, Rouault's cluding a composition by Hubert Robert.

Briest

24 November: Modern and contemporary paintings are a house specialty. On offer this time are works by Magritte, Tanguy, Yves Klein, Dubuffet, Fontana and Max Ernst (oil and collage), together with Renoit's impressive Femme Assise dans un Parc and Henri Martin's view of the Port of Marseille

December 16: Just to prove that you can still find buried treasure in France, this sale is dominated by silver and gold coins from the reigns of Louis XIII and Louis XIV, discovered by workmen in Normandy in November.

Charbonneaux

November 27: Another of the house's regular moderncontemporary art sales, with prestigious works by Alentour, Alberola, Andy Warbol, Van Doesburg, Picabia and Undertwasser and, notably a Penne (1928) by Czaky a Tele (1908) by Zadkine and a cable by Diego Giacometti.

December 21: 18th century furniture with a plethora of prestigious stamps - Dubois, Petit, Boudin, Garnier, R.V.L.C., Vassou and Migeon. Note also an Empire salon suite that belonged to Cambacérès, and an extraordinary lacquered secretaire adorned with gold insects and birds.

Enghien les-Bains

Enghien, just north of Paris, grew up in the 19th century because of the healing quality of its thermal springs. Today it is better know for its auction room: sales of modern paintings and Art Nouvesu/Arr Deco objects pull in buyers from all over the world

November 29: Auctionects Champin-Lombrail-Gautier will be knocking down a numbet of fine modern works, inchiding two Picassos: Buste de Penme (June 1953) and Nature Morte au Panier de Fruits et Pot de Fleurs (August 1942), exhibited at the Victoria & Albert Museum in 1945. A typical early portrait by Derain, Femme en Jaune sur Rond Bleu (panel, 1904), also stands out. Labat-Thierry

December 7/8: Last June, a Los Angeles collector chose Labat-Thicary to sell his 19th century French furniture and objets d'art. Prices were high and, several other American vendors have since followed his example. Items from their collections will be under the hammer along with furniture and objets d'art that belonged to Louis II and Princess Ghis-

December 3: Top lot should be an historic Savonnerie carper (7 meters long) with intricate floral decor that has hitherto remained in the châreau in central France for which it was ordered in 1752, Other attractions include an ensemble of gousches executed in Canton for the Dutch Consul in 1829; 2 superb pair of 18th century Italian mythological groups.

Loodmer November 23: Loudmer stages a number of major modern painting sales each year and will be hoping to repeat this autumn the international success achieved by the famous Aimé & Marguerite Macghe Collection in 1982 and 1984. Fernand Léger's Garçon de Café (1920) and Van Dongen's Trois Femmes (1909) are both estimated at 5-7 million francs. Other important works include La Femme aux Mains Jointes (1924) by Juan Gos and Cripuscule by Rouzult. A Picasso engraving, La Femme qui Pleure (1937), should attain a mighty 21/2-3 million francs, while another aquatint/dry-point etching by the same artist, La Femme au Tambour (1939), won't be far

Maitre Blache November 15: A still life by Kremegne, a view of the Boulogne (1930) and a Kikoune are among the major attractions of this modern picture sale in Versailles, Maitre Blache regularly armains international attention, especially with its world renowned Fior. alies and has helped popularize many of the lesser known Post Impressionists.

A Solid Appraisal Means More Than a Report Card

By SHERRY BUCHANAN

ARIS — Merit pay increases are coming into wider use in Europe, and with them, the rimal of the annual review. Appraisals of performance are in turn spawning efforts to bolster employee motivation and to make sure the light executives are matched with the right jobs.

For American companies, "Management by Objective," as it is mown in corporate-speak, is longstanding practice. Performance s evaluated against a series of goals. Raises, bonuses and promo-ions are based on that rating, which becomes part of an employ-a boss decides who

In Europe, where automatic annual pay raises have been nodest in recent years beause of a slowdown in inflaion, office meritocracy is a new but increasingly popular

"In British companies, here is a decisive swing to sayment by results and indiidual- and company perfor-nance-related rewards, said ligel Dyckhoff, a consultant with Spencer Stuart, the executive search firm in London.

A survey of French companies by Hay-France, a management onsulting firm, indicated that 37 percent will base executive aises this year solely on merit, compared with 18 percent in 1985. ixty percent of the companies said their decisions on executive aises would be based at least parily on merit.

All this means that many executives must now learn to ap-raise as well as manage.

"For French personnel managers, it's like having a new job," aid Laurent Dufetel, director of human resources at Hay-France 1 Paris. "Before, a good personnel manager was judged according to how well they negotiated with the unions. Now they have to train line managers to set up and conduct performance." · pance appraisals."

Experts say that a good performance review should not resem-le a school report card, which grades a child on subjects about hich he or she has very little to say. First, a boss should discuss · nd negotiate what an employee's goals should be. Next, there ould be frequent reviews, so the employee does not learn too that he failed to meet expectations.

"The most important point is that there be a constant dialogue etween boss and subordinate throughout the year," said Elisaeth Martini of Hewlett-Packard France, the French subsidiary ___ f the U.S. computer group.

Quantitative performance, like sales, production, and even ustomer satisfaction, is relatively easy to measure. But a qualitawe appraisal, which basically requires passing judgment on omeone's behavior, is another story. To reduce an employee's efensiveness, specific incidents — good and bad — should be coorded and kept on file. At appraisal time, the good should be remioned along with the no-so-good. Sweeping generalizations -= bout character are likely to be counterproductive.

"One thing we have to explain to French managers is that enformance appraisals are not supposed to be like the last udgment Day, where the boss decides who goes to hell and who oes to heaven," said Mr. Dufetel of Hay-France.

A good appraisal covers the employee's plans for the future nd his training. This is especially important for executives who re not working at their capacity because they are in the wrong

. What happens when an employee disagrees with the appraisal md cannot sway the boss? A few companies allow employees to ppeal. At Hay-France, a manager must discuss with colleagues he appraisal he has prepared before meeting with the employee.

Knowing that he will have to defend his appraisal before peers educes the likelihood that he will judge someone arbitrarily.

£1 Billion Is Possible on Paper

stalled, it choked. But finally the world's largest-ever equity offering got off the ground. By the close of trading Friday, the British Petroleum Co. issue was airborne.

Some people thought it shouldn't be. For example, underwriters who had signed up to support the massive share offering stand to lose £1 hillion ($1.7 billion) on paper.

However, for domestic political reasons, the BP offer was virtually irrevocable since it represented what many officials considered to be the erown jewel in the government's effort to sell off state-owned

Britain's Labor Party has been strongly opposed to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's privatization efforts and has criticized the government for being too supportive of the interests of Britain's financial services community.

Now, with trading in the BP shares under way, market reaction in London has turned from appre-hension to relief, even restramed

The reason is that the Bank of England is providing a safety net in the form of a buyback offer to limit the financial risk and potential market turmoil implied in a heavily undersubscribed issue.

The British chancellor of the Ex-chequer, Nigel Lawson, "has to be given credit for showing ingennity under considerable pressure," said Kenneth Inglis, an equity-market forecaster with the London bro-kers, Phillip & Drew.

"The BP offer, as amended, has helped bring back a lot of buying into the London market that we hadn't seen for days."

When the final tally of applications for the 2.19 billion BP shares available was made Friday, only 270,234 investors had signed up for a total of 70.7 million shares. The shares were being offered at 330

U.S. Indicators Slip 0.1%, First Fall in 8 Months

WASHINGTON - The U.S. government's chief gauge of future economic activity slipped 0.1 perin eight months, the Commerce Department reported Friday. Many economists believe the setback for the index of leading eco-nomic indicators is the first of what will be a series of declines caused by the collapse of the stock market. However, government analysts cautioned that much of the weakness in September came from a drop in the length of the average work week. They said that this de-cline was misleading because the survey of work-week hours was conducted in the week that included the Labor Day holiday, which depressed the results. This was the biggest oegative force oo the index in September, followed by a decline in the stock market reflected by a 3.2 percent

The 0.1 percent decline in the index was the first drop since a 0.6 percent fall in January. Four of the nine available indicators were positive. The biggest source of strength was a slowdown in business delivery times, indicating increased demand. Other positive forces on the index were a drop in weekly unemployment claims, a rise in manufacturers' orders for consumer goods and a jump in the money supply.

Analysts said that the record collapse of the stock market this month is likely to have three times the oegative impact on the October index that the September fall had on that month's indicators. Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm, said he ex-pected the iodex to decline for at least three mooths and predicted a mild recession starting early next

David Wyss, an economist at Data Resources Ioc. of Lexington, Massachusetts, said he also believed it was possible that the index would fall for three mooths. But he said that the declines might be small, with the stock market weakness offset by strength in other seging in the market.

$8.34 billioo in September from $5.31 billion in August but narrowed from a year earlier, the Finance Ministry said Friday. The ministry said the surplus narrowed from $9.24 billion in September last year, the fifth straight monthly decline on a year-to-year basis. A ministry official said that the dollar's decline against the yen "is responsible in large measure for the diminishing trend" in the surplus on current account, which measures investment income and services such as shipping and insurance, as well as merchandise trade.

On the basis of merchandise trade only, the surplus widened to $8.45 billion in September from $6.21 billion in August, but narrowed from a surplus of $9.86 billioo a year earlier. Exports in September rose by about 6 percent from a year earlier to $19.9 billion, while imports surged around 24 percent, to $11 billion.

Stocks Surge in Tokyo, Europe

London Is Up 67, but Down For the Week

LONDON -Stock prices ended higher Europe Friday as buyers came back to the markets amid

In London, the Financial Times-Stock Exchange 100-share index closed up 67.80 points, or 4.03 percent, at 1,749.80 points, extending Thursday's gain of 23.60 points. For the week, however, the index was down about 2.5 percent.

Volume was high, with more than 932 million shares changing hands, including 250 million new shares in British Petroleum Co.

Dealers said that the better-thanexpected debut of the BP shares, coupled with an opening rally on the New York Stock Exchange, al-lowed the market to extend Thursday's gains. Other shares got a boost from the BP issue, and the FTSE index was up about 90 points at midafternoon before drifting

Hopes for a cut soon in 9.5 percent British base lending rates also lent the stock market some support over the past few days, dealers said.

In Paris, the main bourse indica-tor closed the day up 4.68 percent. Dealers said that most buying acdvity came from domestic institutions, which were taking what ap-peared to be long-term positions. The bourse will be closed Monday

The Frankfurt Commerzbank index of 60 leading shares rose 98.90 points, or 6.93 percent, to close at 1,526.00. Dealers said domestic buyers had flooded back to the market after gains on other change prohibited members from markets in the Far East and Eu-opening new positions.

Opinion about the further direc-tion of share prices was deeply divided. Some dealers said they expeted some dealers said they ex-pected investors to take profits at the start of next week. Friday's dol-lar stabilization was just a tempo-rary technical correction, they said, and share prices were likely to drop if the dollar started to fall again.

In Madrid, the general index rose 10.33 points, or 4.86 percent, to close at 222.68, recovering partially from Thursday's pfunge of 21.71 points, its sharpest one-day was open in 1986. The marker's spectacular success initially came from bedging needs created by the explosive growth of unit trusts and mutual funds, which grew from 77 hillion francs in 1980 to 1 trillion francs in 1986. Other factors encouraging its growth were the downward drift of interest rates within the first several months and the huoyant bond market.

Much less spectacular has been the performance of the 90-day Treasury bill futures contract, list ed in June last year. It was effectively throttled at birth hy the absence of a cash market, although it could soon receive more attenuon as nervous investors turn from long-term to short-term instruments.

An option on the notional bond will eventually be the third contract introduced on the official market, even though it has been postponed several rimes.

"Right now, it looks like the NYSE is pretty good because you can't leave it," be said.

The perception of widespread market may have already taken a toll on the prices of NASDAQ stocks. While the Dow Jones industrial stances in the over-the-counter average bas slumped 25.3 percent since Sept. 30, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index has dropped by 24.4 percent, the NASDAQ composite index has fallen by 30.9 percent. In the past 10 days alone, there have been three days when the "market." as defined by the Dow, has railied, but the NASDAQ index has been

Warburg Urges Sale of T-Bonds

LONDON - S.G. Warburg Securities Ltd. said Friday that it was urging its customers to sell U.S. Treasury bonds, now at their best levels in months, because the dollar is likely to weaken further.

Warburg's weekly interna-tional bond report said yields on long-term U.S. Treasury bonds, now at about 9.03 percent, are likely to rise to 9.50 percent as the dollar falls another 10 to 15 percent.

The firm's economists forecast a drop in the dollar to 1.68 10 1.70 Denische marks in the next three mooths and to around 1.60 DM within 12 months. A decline seems likely, Warburg said, in view of the stock market collapse and the large U.S. trade delicit.

Fed Said to Make Good BP: Issue Proceeds but Losses Loom On Pledge of Liquidity

NEW YORK - The Federal sued a statement affirming its Reserve is making good on its readiness to serve as a source of promise to provide the U.S. bank-liquidity to support the economic ing system with adequate liquidity and financial system." while it weathers the storm of last week's historic drop in stock prices, according to economists. Both the pattern and size of open market operations since the U.S. stock market's fall on Oct. 19 illustrate the Fed's resolve to ease pressures on bank reserves, they said. They were trying to back up their statement on providing liquidity and drive the funds rate down to a level they think is right," said Anthony Karydakis of Mitsubishi Bank Ltd.

The Fed can directly influence the federal funds rate, the rate on overnight loans of reserves among U.S. banks, by selling or buying government securities in the open market

On Oct. 20, the day after Wall Street stocks lost 22.6 percent of

With the U.S. bond market trouhied that morning by the aftershock of the plunge in stocks the day before, the statement was seen as a much-needed palliative for investor confidence. The Fed had already been add-system repurchase agreements since Oct. 15, the day after oews of a larger-than-expected U.S. trade deficit in August. Repurchase agreements are basically loan arrangements by which a holder sells a security at a specified

ing to banks' reserves steadily via price with a commitment to repurchase at a later date. In the week ended Wednesday, the first week of the two-week maintenance period, the Fed's repurchases averaged nearly $12.1

billion a day, Mr. Karydakis said, "a huge amount by all standards."
They only needed to do $6 billion to $6.5 billion on average," he said. "It shows they were making good on their promise to provide mple liquidity." William Sullivan of Dean Witter

By specifically using the language of September's agreement in Reynolds & Co. said, "It clearly indicates the aggressiveness of the Fed in providing liquidity to the banking system." Economists also noted the low

(Continued from first finance page) tracting up to five million investors was shattered when the BP share price dropped well below 330 pence, following the turnoil on the world's stock markets.

British and foreign investment banks that had formally agreed to guarantee the issue for a fee were forced to take up the slack at a potentially huge paper loss if they sell at current prices.

The 17 chief British underwriters had spread their respective risk by further underwriting the issue among about 400 institutional investors. But four American, three Canadian and five Japanese guarantors were left holding their BP portfolios. Analysts had feared earlier this week that BP shares and markets in general would be depressed by a wholesale unloading of BP shares by underwriters seeking to cut their osses. But those fears appear to have been assuaged by the Bank of England's intervention.

The BP issue will be attractive now that the downside risk has been removed," said John Toalster, oil analyst with the London brokers, Hoare Govett.

"It's the only stock on the mar-ket that has an official floor on it," he said. "Barring a further retreat of the market as a whole, I can't see the share price falling back" to the government-imposed floor price. The central bank's buyback offer, which is valid for at least one month but no more than two, guarantees a floor price of 70 pence for each of the new partly-paid BP shares, for which the underwriters and private investors paid 120

The 70 pence offer reflects — on a part-paid basis — the fully-paid closing price of BP shares Thursday, at 259 pence.

The original offer, detailed on Oct. 15, was for payment of the 330 pence price in three stages, the first at 120 pence, followed by two of 105 pence by 1989.

Buoyed by the Bank of England's price floor, existing BP shares were up 8 pence Friday to 267 pence at the close of the Loo-doo Stock Exchange. In light of the Bank of England's guarantee, bankers here estimate the maximum combined paper loss to underwriters would be £1.05 billion if they decide to liquidate their portfolios at the 70 pence huyback

Prior to Thursday's buyback announcement, estimates were for a collective pretax paper loss of between $500 and $600 million for the U.S. underwriters, which include Goldman Sachs & Co., Morgan Stanley & Co., Salomon Inc. and Shearsoo Lehman Brothers

The four firms subscribed to a combined 480 million BP shares. A representative of one of the underwriters said Friday: "We're going to try to get the best long-term holders of these BP shares as possible, we're not simply going to dump them in the market. We'll be watching market conditions elosely and plan to sell these BP shares at various prices every day over the next couple of weeks."

The BP sale involved the flotation of the government's remaining 31.5 percent stake in the British energy conglomerate, or some 1.73 billion existing shares, plus 459 million new BP shares issued by the company to the government as a capital-raising measure for corporate expansion.

From the British Treasury's point of view, what matters most is that it will receive its anticipated £5.7 hillion in revenue from the sale.

W HATEVER happened to the 1960s? Or, to cite a telling vignette in Jonathan Schell's "History in Sherman Park": How could it be that one of the people he interviewed — who in 1968 had voted for Senator Eugene McCarthy, who in 1972 had voted for Senator Eugene McCarthy, who in 1972 had voted for Senator Grant McCarthy, who in 1972 had voted for Senator George McGovern, who in 1976 had voted for Peter Camejo of the the Socialist Workers Party, who in 1980 had voted for Barry Commoner of the Citizens Party - decided in 1984 to vote for Ronald Reagan?

77 "Arrivederci

Both the Schell book and Hans Koning's "Nineteen Sixty Eight" explore in their respective ways the extraordinary transformation we appear to have undergone in the last two decades. Schell — a former reporter for The New Yorker whose bestknown previous book is his meditation on nuclear catastrophe, "The Fate of the Earth" - does so by getting to know a particular American family during the 1984 presidential campaign hetween Reagan and his Democratic challenger, Walter Mondale.

Hans Koning, who has also contributed to The New Yorker and written many books, measures the distance we have traveled since the 1960s by celebrating the year 1968 for the "clarity of perception" it brought. "It was as if a curtain had been raised, a veil lifted. The cliches, platitudes, and myths of our public life, what may politely he called our Fourth of July rhetoric, were suddenly seen as such, and not just by a handful of lefties in small magazines, but by the people at large, many of them."

Of the two, Schell's report is the more thoughtful and thought-provoking. Combining his prohing yet U.S. history, he wends his way to a theory of why the present times seem so out of whack. The only problem with his unorthodox approach is that it lacks dramatic inevitability. The people he gets to know remain somewhat indistinct as characters.

For instance, it is often Schell who raises the question with his subjects of nuclear Armageddon in our lives, which is predictable enough considering his deep concern with the issue. In response, his subjects shrug and say, in so many words, yes, that's a problem all right, but what are you going to do? The result is that Schell's concluding emphasis on the importance of nuclear war in the contemporary psyche has about it a certain gratuitous quality.

Compared with Koning, however, he is a saint of objectivity. In Koning's vision, there isn't much room for what lies beyond his beliefs. "Looking back now from the winter 1986-87, I see hat throughoul those wild and calm times, the year 1968 was the most meaningful to me, and still remains so. Meaningful in a political way, that is. But politics and personal emotions have always been inter-

Although he quickly adds that for him emotions don't "take the place of thinking," he neither explains his personal feelings nor bothers to define a system of values agains! which to measure the benefits and drawbacks of that tumultuous year.

Schell comes a little closer to explaining the sense of confusion both be and Koning believe many people are suffering from these days. Dismissing the 960s as an aberrant time when prosperity made us forget certain abiding economic realities, he worries less about the decline of revolutionary activism and more about what the bomb is quietly doing to us.

"If there is active complicity by the average citizen in the nuclear peril, it may lie in this: We are ready to pay for our comfort and safety by accepting the threat of our annihilation, and of the possi-ble annihilation of mankind. The point in the pre-sent context, however, is that the shape of the peril fits into a broader pattern than our political life Reality "looks at us from behind the glass wall of the television screen, leaving us free, if we so wish, not to think about it at all — at least until such time as it hursts through the screen and vaporizes us reality, this, too, contains its subjective element. But who can deny a plausibility to Schell's vision? Be-cause who can finally deny that the bomb is real?

Resurgent Bills, Colts Tighten Up AFC East

By Gerald Eskenazi

New York Times Service NEW YORK - Last year it was the most lopsided division in the American Conference: two playoff teams at the top, two teams with a total of seven victories at the bottom. But who's in first in the Eastern Division now? Almost everybody.

Division now? Almost everybody.

Four of the five teams in this National Football League division are ited at 3-3: Buffalo, Indianapolis, New England and the Jets. Miami, at 2-4, is within whispering distance in the five-team division.

The reason for this bunching up, the sudden emergence of the Bills and the Colts, has more in do with finishing last in other years than in doing well during this year's strike games. All those first-round draft picks are finally paying off.

The Colts have not been a contending team since 1979, the Bills not since 1981. In each of the last three seasons they finished as the bottom two teams in the division. Those poor finishes guaranteed high first-round picks.

The Bills' quarterhack, Jim Kelly (a 1983 first-rounder who opted for the United States Football League before signing last season), faces the Redskins at Orchard Park, New York, on Sunday in a battle of division leaders. The Bills are also huoyed by other recent first-rounders. From this year there is Shane Conlan at linebacker, from last year there are Ronnie Harmon, running back, and Will Wolford, a tackle. The 1985 first-rounders are Bruce Smith, a defensive end, and Derrick Burroughs, a defensive back.

The Colts face the New York Jets on Sunday, and even though they still haven't signed Cornelius Bennett, this year's first-round choice, they come in armed with four recent top draft picks among their linebackers and defensive line: The linebackers are Johnic Cooks (1982) and Duane Bickett (1985); Jon Hand (1986) and Donnell Thompson (1981) shore up the line. In addition, Barry Krauss, the left joutside linebacker, was the No. 1 pick in 1979.

AMERICAN CONFERENCE

Indianapolis (3-3) at New York Jets (3-3): The Colts boast a 6-3 record since Ron Meyer took over as coach with three games to play last year. Their linebackers are very active and love to blitz. The Jets' Ken O'Brien is coming off a loss to the Redskins in which he was sacked seven times. But he should be helped by the return of Joe Fields at right guard. That could also help Freeman McNeil's running game, which was not productive. The Colts are playing error-free football.

Cleveland (4-2) at San Diego (5-1): The Chargers will see whether they belong in first place — their 5-1 record is pumped up with a 3-0 strike mark. They have been tearing past offenses with a conferenceleading 27 sacks. Now they have a defensive leader in Chip Banks, who is coupled with Billy Ray Smith at linebacker. The Browns' running game is weak, but the defense is willing. The top-rated pass defense of the Browns has held opponents to a 42.3 percent completion rate.

Houston (4-2) at Cincinnati (2-4): Mike Rozier (Remember him? The Heisman winner once upon a time?) has rushed for 294 yards the last two games against the regulars. He is part of an improved Oilers outif that has more sacks than it has allowed and holds the opposi-tion to only 26.3 percent success on third down. But Boomer Esiason was able to complete more than 50 percent of his passes against Houston last season, the only one to do it twice. The Bengals boast the league's top rushing offense, and top defense against the rush.

Pittsburgh (4-2) at Miami (2-4): The Steelers' much-improved secondary has two rookies starting — Delton Hall at cornerback and Thomas Everett at free safety. Now that Rod Woodson, the No. 1 pick, has signed, he will crack the lineup next week. An old-fashioned Steeler running attack is led by Earnest Jackson, who already has three 100-yard games. But the Steelers win only Super Bowls in Miami, losing all five regular season games there. Don Shula is looking for his 250th career victory after three straight losses. He will have help with the return of John Offerdahl, his key linebacker and defensive signal-caller.

Los Angeles Raiders (3-3) at New England (3-3): Raymond Berry will call the plays instead of Steve Grogan, the veteran quarterback who had been telling Tony Eason what to do. Berry could be more conservative than Grogan. With Craig James out for the season, the Pais' running game is suffering. The Raiders' outstanding pass rush and smothering defensive backfield could be even more effective as a

NATIONAL CONFERENCE

New Orleans (3-3) at Atlanta (2-4): If statistics mean anything, this is a walkover for the Saints. They are the top team in possession time since their Rueben Mayes is able to grind it out. The Falcons, meanwhile, are last in the league in stopping the run. The Falcons have started a different quarterback in each of the last seven games.

Scott Campbell hreaks the streak when he starts his second straight.

Philadelphia (2-4) at St. Louis (2-4): The Eagles sacked the Cowboys five times; the Gianus sacked the Cardinals five times. Pressure is the key to the Eagles' defense. The last two games the regulars played they created eight turnovers. The Cards' Neil Lomax will be looking for I.T. Smith, the league's leading receiver with 29 catches. The Eagles' left cornerhack, Roynell Young, will be pestering Smith.

San Francisco (5-1) at Los Angeles Rams (1-5): The 49ers may be on top, but Coach Bill Walsh is unhappy with his running game. So Roger Craig is switching to running back from fullback while Tom Rathman goes to fullback. But they will be moving behind a revamped offensive line in which three backups are starting. Eric Dickerson has been placed on the inactive list, complicating things for the Rams' offense.

Tampa Bay (3-3) at Green Bay (3-2-1): The Bues know they're not good enough to beat the Bears (losing twice this season) but they think they're good enough against everybody else. They'll find out as they start a stretch of five of six games on the road. From last in defense a year ago, the Bucs are fifth. Don Majkowski, who is the Packers' first rookie quarterback to produce a 300-yard game, is still behind because of the strike.

INTERCONFERENCE

Detroit (1-5) at Denver (3-2-1): The Broncos are 29-6 at home in the last 35 games under Coach Dan Reeves. But Reeves is complaining that his complicated offensive and defensive schemes have been disrupted by the strike, And now his top runner, Gerald Wilhite, is Buse for the year with a broken leg. His defense, though, will probably bother Chuck Long, making the fifth start of his career. This could be the game Kari Mecklenburg and Rulon Jones, who average 22 sacks a season between them, get on the board this year. Reass City (1-5) at Chicago (5-1): The worst offense faces the Bears, who have, as usual, the best defense in yards allowed. Jim McMahon, who came on late to bring the Bears from behind against the Bucs, will start. The Bears have won 23 straight when he does. Minnesota (3-3) at Seattle (4-2): The Vikings didn't have any dissension during the strike, but they didn't get any victories either. Their regulars are 3-0 and think they can rattle Dave Krieg, apparently the key to halting the Seahawks. But Curt Warner is among the Same's top runners and Steve Largent leads the conference with 26

Washington (5-1) at Buffalo (3-3): The Bills' regulars have scored almost 100 points in three games — and yielded virtually as many. The hig passing game of Kelly to Chris Burkett will have to offset the Redskins' attack on the Bills' suspect defense.

Baseball Chief Says 'Never' to Instant Replay

The Associated Press PORTLAND, Oregon — Um-piring mistakes in the final game of basehall's World Series haven't softened Commissioner Peter Ueberroth's vehement opposition in the use of television instant replays in help on close calls.

"There will be no use of instant replays as long as I'm commission-er." Ueberroth said at a news conference Thursday.

"Umpires miss calls. 1 think that's part of the tradition of baseball," he said. "I think in the recent World Series they had, as close as I could see, six perfect games, then they missed a couple of calls in the

Ueberroth said umpiring mistakes "haven't hurt us in the past dramatically, so I'm not going to change tradition." Because of the speed a basehall travels, a player may seem out or safe, depending on the camera angle, he said,

Hearns Knocks Out Roldan and Wins His 4th Title

The knockdown did not discourage Roldan. He wildly pursued Hearns, who used his defensive wits. He applied a glove to Rol-dan's head, pushing it toward the canvas so Roldan could not punch. He slipped under Roldan and raised him bodily off the canvas.

He clinched when necessary. Then he knocked Roldan down a second time with a three-punch combination that finished with a

Moroccan 'Mystery Man' Ready for N.Y. Marathon

Nechadi el-Mostafa

New York Times Service NEW YORK — When be came to New York to run in the marathon last year, Nechadi el-Mostafa of Morocco paid his own expenses.

That alone said a great deal about his chances. Fred Lebow, the race director, picks up the tab for the very best runners. And yet, halfway through the race, there was Mostafa, among the leaders, setting a pace that would have threatened the New York record of 2 hours 8 minutes 13 seconds established by Alberto Mostafa, whose first half was run in 1:04, eventually faded to finish 66th in 2:34:37, but his performance signaled the start of a new career.

He is among the favorites this year, the "mystery man," as the marathon officials like to call him. Mostafa was impressed by the success of Italian distance runners and the modern training facility in Brescia, Italy. He moved in Italy in August 1986 and sold rugs, saving money to come to New York. The investment, he said, was well worth it.

Only a month after returning to Italy after his impressive performance, he was invited to compete in a marathon in Sicily. He linished second, lowering his time to 2:20. He was a star on the rise.

Home Sweet Scary Home

By Patricia Leigh Brown

EW YORK — To Gene
Noise 2 writer of horror stones, there is something inherently fearsome about houses. You can never be sure you're alone, he musec recently. The fact that you can't see the entire house at one time is unnerving. There is always the possibility of opening the closet and finding clothes swaying mysteriously, or sneaking into the kitch-en for a midnight snack to encoun-ter a monster in the mixing bowl.

In the last week of October, when the breath turns ghostly and trees are clenched in the wind's teeth, thoughts turn, not to tasteful interiors, but to the sinister aspects

The spectral bouse is as old as the fairy tale. Its contemporary interpretations have sprung from the mysterious castle of the 18th-century Gothic novel, and from Edgar Alian Poe's House of Usher, where an air of stern, deep and irredeemahle gloom hung over and pervaded all."

"The image of the haunted house has been with us since before the dawn of time," said the film director Roger Corman, best known for his 1960s films based on Poe's stories and starring Vincent Price. "In the future, a structure on a distant planet will probably be haunted."

The haunted house is big business today, stalking the world of teen-age culture and VCRs in movies like "Poltergeist" and "Gbostbusiers."

The Winds of Change at Brasserie Lipp

By Batty James uernational Herald Tribune

PARIS — In what is almost the equiva-lent of adding another couple of hundred feet to the Eiffel Tower, the new management of Brasserie Lipp has decreed that the establishment on Boulevard Saint-Germain will henceforth remain open on Mondays and close for only four weeks a year instead of nine.

For a place where a new dish is admitted to the menu as rarely as a new article in the constitution, such a change is momentous stuff, and some of the regulars - who include politicians, ministers, writers and Le Tout Paris — are fearful that it portends a new mood of commercialism at Lipp.

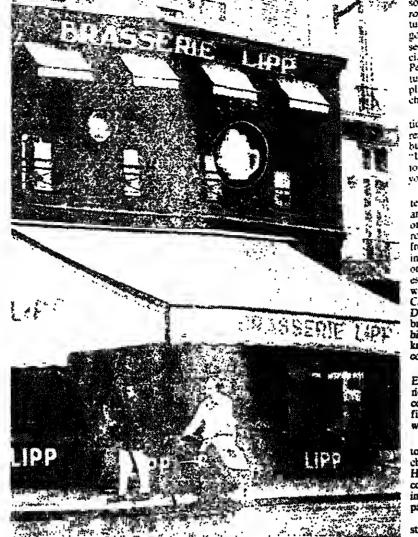

"There's a certain anxiety in the air." said Jean Diwo, author of a book that chronicled the restaurant's more-than-100year history.

For much of this century, Lipp has performed the role of a kind of gastronomic Switzerland, a neutral ground geographi-cally midway between the National Assem-bly and the Senate where politicians can agree to disagree over a heaping plate of good squerkraut and a foaming serieux of beer. Cahineis are said to have been formed in the mirrored dining room and political squabbles healed there. The last four presidents of France, including the incumbent, François Mitterrand, have all been clients at one time or another.

Lipp is as much club as restaurant, not only for the politicians but also for publishers and writers, theater people, film stars, and television or media personalities. It was run in autocratic fashion hy Roger Cazes, its owner until his death last April, when a distant relative by marriage, Annie Perrochon, became president and director

Perrochon, 43. bad no previous experi-ence of running a restaurant, and says she has no intention of making fundamental changes. "Let's just say I'm thinking about some adaptanons and improvements," she said during an interview in her cramped office, harely hig enough to contain a desk and chair. The menu, including the saveloy sausage in mustard sauce that Ernest Hemingway considered his favorite dish, remains sacrosanct, she said.

But, according to Diwo, a habitue for many years, the wind of change is blowing through Lipp. Opening Mondays has meant that new waiters have had to be hired alongside the dignified Lipp immutables, some of whom have worked there for 30 years or more. The house now accepts plastic, a definite aversion of Cazes for whom the very notion of credit was not Perrochon agreed that succeeding such a strong character has not been easy. "He is ominpresent. You can't entirely replace him. You have to live with his image."

She faced hostility from many among the 65-strong staff who had expected Cazes to be succeeded by his nephew and long-time deputy. Michel Cazes, "Things were a hit cold at first." she acknowledged.

Perrochon said the main challenge of running Brasserie Lipp is that of striking a balance between making it open to the world and at the same time keeping it 25 am Lipp were just another restaurant.
